

Advocating for Indigenous Children's rights, using Indigenous models

JOIN US FOR A CONVERSATION WITH
AVIÂJA EGEDE LYNGE, NATIONAL SPOKESPERSON FOR CHILDREN'S RIGHTS IN GREENLAND

MODERATED BY
ELSA STAMATOPOULOU, DIRECTOR, INDIGENOUS PEOPLES' RIGHTS PROGRAM

17 OCTOBER | 3 P.M. ET
THE INTERCHURCH CENTER -
61 CLAREMONT AVE, 3RD FLOOR, CONFERENCE ROOM 320C

In advocating for Human Rights, there is no all-round solution or model. This also applies within work with Indigenous peoples' rights, and when working with taboo subjects such as sexual abuse of children and suicide among indigenous peoples, one must manage to get within social control and power relations maintained by the small collective societies. Aviâja Egede Lynge, who attended the 2014 Human Rights Program at ISHR, has been traveling in 40 INUIT communities in Greenland. She wants to emphasize the importance of looking into the cultures and social controls of the communities to work with Indigenous children's rights.

This event will take place in Conference room 320c, located on the 3rd floor of the Interchurch Center. Please register before the event and check in at the front desk when you arrive.

Register here: <https://bit.ly/3dJWPMN>

Or scan QR code for link

