

NUEVOS CAMINOS

LATINX HISTORY IN THE 21ST CENTURY

Latinxs represent the largest ethnic minority in the United States, yet in-depth discussions of the Latinx experience remain rare in the academy and in American popular culture. Nuevos Caminos brings acclaimed Latinx historians to Columbia to showcase their recent scholarship on such wide-ranging topics as Latinx conservatism, gay Miami, and anti-Mexican violence along the US-Mexico border. The symposium will close with a roundtable discussion exploring the past, present, and possible futures of Latinx history.

Friday, April 22 | 9:00 AM - 2:00 PM

Maison Française, Columbia University | Registration Required

<https://forms.gle/dVmjGXaXGKQTHggZ7>

Symposium Participants

Gerry Cadava (Northwestern University) Rosina Lozano (Princeton University)
Julio Capó (Florida International University) Monica Martinez (Brown University)
Lori Flores (SUNY-Stony Brook) George Sanchez (University of South Carolina)
Alex LaRotta (Houston Community College)