

INTERNSHIP OFFER – EMERGING MARKETS DEBT TEAM

BARINGS

Barings' dedicated emerging markets team manages over $6 billion in assets across corporates, sovereign, local debt and blended strategies. An integrated team of 19 seasoned portfolio managers, analysts and traders analyses the sovereign debt of over 75 countries and the corporate debt of over 600 companies.

INTERNSHIP TOPIC

The Emerging Markets sovereign team is looking for a graduate intern for the summer of 2018 to be based in Boston or London to work on the following topic: Savings Rates, their drivers and their impact on investment and growth

The main objective of the summer internship is to research topics such as: What determines how much countries save? How stable are savings rates in individual countries? What is the relationship between savings and the exchange rate?

Another sub-project of the internship would be to work on: Allocation of Portfolio flows and global financial conditions. The main objective of this sub-project is to look how Portfolio Flows get allocated to Emerging countries' local debt markets subject to Global financial and liquidity conditions.

SKILLS

The candidate should have training in macroeconomics and finance. Research or previous professional experience focusing on Savings Rate or Portfolio Flows dynamics would be strongly valued. Knowledge of statistical software is very important.

PROCESS

Only graduate applicants will be considered. Deadline for application is Friday 2 March 2018.

Applicants should send their resumes (and any relevant research publication) with Subject "Application to Barings EMD internship SAVINGS RATE" to:
