

Israel Institute, an independent, non-advocacy organization dedicated to supporting rigorous teaching and research of modern Israel. I am writing to let you know about the availability of doctoral and post-doctoral fellowships for talented candidates in the Department of History. Doctoral fellowships of up to $10,000 per year are available for Ph.D. candidates who have passed their comprehensive exams and are researching and writing dissertations on an Israel-focused topic or incorporating Israel as a case study. Post-doctoral fellowships of up to $60,000 per year are available for promising doctoral candidates who will complete their doctoral degrees prior to September 1, 2018, (when the fellowships begin) and plan to maintain Israel as their research focus in the future.

Doctoral Fellowships: <https://israelinstitute.org/programs/doctoral-fellowships>

Post-Doctoral Fellowships: <https://israelinstitute.org/programs/post-doctoral-fellowships>

Our next deadline for post-doctoral fellowship applications is January 16, 2018. Candidates for doctoral fellowships have until March 15, 2018, to apply. This academic year, we're supporting two visiting professors at Columbia. Dr. Rabinowitz will teach in the School of International and Public Affairs as well as collaborate with The Earth Institute, while Dr. Sommer will teach in the political science department. Both Dr. Sommer and I would be happy to take questions if you or prospective candidates are interested in learning more about our fellowships. Erika Falk, PhD Program Director: 202.289.4519, efalk@israelinstitute.org