INTRODUCTION FROM OUR FACULTY

A global leader in historical scholarship, the Department of History at Columbia is deeply committed to undergraduate education. Many of us teach in the College Core. All of us teach undergraduate lectures and seminars in history.

Our rich undergraduate curriculum covers most areas of the world and most periods of history. Our courses explore various methodologies, a wide range of ways of writing history, and different approaches to the past. We emphasize no one approach to history and insist upon no single interpretive model. Thinking historically is an analytical skill of increasing value in an epoch dominated by short-term perspectives.

Whether you are interested in global inequality or medieval law, the evolution of drug trafficking or the history of human rights, the American West or Meiji Japan, you will find courses that speak to your interests and complement your other studies. Most of our courses are open to undergraduates from all majors and programs.

The History Department offers a major and a concentration in history. Both enable students to achieve a deeper and broader knowledge of a particular field of history, while also developing the kinds of analytical and writing skills important in many areas of life. The heart of the undergraduate major is the senior thesis seminar, a small-group course in which students work closely with an individual faculty member on some subject. Undergraduate majors are not required to write a senior thesis, however in order to receive departmental honors a senior thesis must be completed. Each year the department offers 3 to 4 sections of Senior Thesis Seminar and students have the flexibility to work on any subject that they choose.

All aspects of undergraduate education are within the purview of the Undergraduate Education Committee (UNDED) which consists of 8 to 9 faculty members advising the students on the major, addressing questions concerning requirements and credits. Students don't have individual advisors assigned to them.

History Listserv: During the academic year, the department sends weekly bulletins to majors and concentrators via its undergraduate listserv. This is a critical source of real-time information including events, course listings, departmental updates, grants, scholarships, internship opportunities, and more. If you aren't getting emails within one week of officially declaring the major or concentration with CC or GS, please email the Undergraduate Administrator(undergraduate-history@columbia.edu) to be added.

CURRICULUM

The History Department offers a variety of courses taught by over fifty faculty members. Courses taught by Barnard History faculty count towards the Columbia history major or concentration, unless otherwise specified in the Directory of Classes (DOC). Apart from the courses offered by the History Dept., some courses offered by other departments, such as East Asian Languages and Culture (EALAC), and Middle Eastern, South Asian, African Studies (MESAAS), and American Studies (AMST) can be cross-listed with History (and thus count towards the degree). Students who wish to take a particular course in any of these departments or any other Humanities and Social Sciences departments and wish to count that course towards History major have to petition the department for cross-listing.

LECTURES, normally worth 4 points, meet twice a week for 1 hour and 15 minutes each session; in general, they have no pre-requisites. History lectures usually have additional required discussion sections that meet once a week. Lectures range from the very large (over 300 students) to the very small (fewer than 25). Most lecture courses require a midterm and a final examination; many also require written assignments and final papers. For identification purposes, history lectures are numbered at the 1000 or 2000 level (exceptions exist for courses taught in the summer, which are sometimes listed at the 3000 level).

SEMINARS, worth 4 points, are more intensive; most are capped at 15 students. Seminars explore focused topics through concentrated reading in secondary literature, primary-source research, or both. They meet once a week for 1 hour and 50 minutes. The workload for seminars is generally heavier than for lectures, with more reading and more written work. Seminars normally do not have a final examination but often require a substantial paper. Some seminars have prerequisites, which are noted in the DOC. In many cases, students must receive permission from the instructor prior to registering for a seminar. History seminars are numbered at the 3000 or 4000 level.

INDEPENDENT STUDY: Students may take independent study courses with faculty members (HIST UN3951 or HIST UN3952). These do not fulfill the seminar requirement for majors (except in rare cases approved by the Director of Undergraduate Studies, DUS) but may fulfill other requirements.

MAJOR & CONCENTRATION

This section lays out the requirements for the undergraduate major and concentration for students in Columbia College and the School of General Studies.

Requirements	Majors	Concentrators
Courses in History	9 courses total*	6 courses total*
Specialization	4 courses, including 1 seminar	3 courses
Breadth requirements (courses outside of specialization)	3 courses: 1 removed in time & 2 removed in space	2 courses: 1 removed in time & 1 removed in space
Seminar requirement	2 seminars (at least 1 in specialization)	None

*Students must take additional history courses in any field in order to reach the total number of courses listed.

TRANSFER AND STUDY-ABROAD CREDITS: No more 3 transfer or study-abroad courses will be accepted toward the major; no more than 2 courses will be accepted toward the concentration. (Oxford or Cambridge students may transfer up to 4 or 3 courses respectively; see the “Study Abroad” section on page 13). The transfer/study abroad courses can only count towards lectures. The seminar requirement of the major must be fulfilled at Columbia or Barnard.

DOUBLE-COUNTING COURSES: Global Core courses originating from the History Department can be applied towards the both requirements. CC and GS also allow a limited number of other courses to count towards two different major or concentration programs, so long as the courses in question already meet the requirements for both programs. For more information, please visit:

https://www.college.columbia.edu/sites/default/files/coi_policy_adopted_spring_2017_2.pdf

SPECIALIZATION: Students are required to choose and complete a “specialization”—that is, a set of courses on a specific field, theme, or subject. In most cases, the regional specialization must be bound by a time period (for example, “20th Century U.S. History” as opposed to just “U.S. History”); any exceptions must be approved by a member of UNDED. A specialization does not appear on the student’s transcript but provides an organizing principle for the program and is required to complete the major or concentration. Students must fulfill a breadth & time requirement by taking courses outside the field of their specialization. In order to make sure that the students take the right courses to fulfill the specialization requirement, the department obliges them to fill a Plan of Study form (POS) and get that form approved by a member of the UNDED. This form needs to be submitted twice during the major, once in the spring of junior year and once during the fall of senior year. Details can be found on page 13.

The requirements of the undergraduate program encourage students to develop in-depth knowledge of the history of a particular time and/or place and to gain a sense of the full scope of history as a discipline.

Sample specializations are listed below; in general, if many courses are offered in a given region, students are asked to specialize as narrowly as possible with regards to the chosen time period:

- Ancient history
- Medieval European history
- Early Modern European history
- Modern European history
- 18th c. United States history
- 19th c. United States history

- 20th c. United States history
- Latin American and Caribbean history
- Middle Eastern history
- African history
- East Asian history
- South Asian history

Students may also work with UNDED to develop thematic specializations; some examples are below:

- Intellectual history
- Women's history
- History of science
- Jewish history
- Economic history
- International and global history (with a suitable regional focus)

These specializations are only examples. Students should work with a member of UNDED to craft a specialization on the topic that most interests them. Majors are required to complete 4 courses in their specialization (including a seminar) and concentrators must complete 3 courses.

BREADTH REQUIREMENT: Majors and concentrators must fulfill a breadth requirement by taking courses outside of their specialization; majors must take 3 and concentrators must take 2. The breadth requirement itself has two parts: time and space. Seminars can be used to fulfill this requirement.

Time: Majors and concentrators must take 1 course covering a time period far removed from their specialization. Students specializing in the modern period must take a course in the pre-modern period; students specializing in the pre-modern period must take a course in the modern.

Pre-modern courses cover a wide range of regions, and the course used for the chronological breadth requirement can cover any region. However, if you are considering a course that is in the same regional field as your specialization, take care that it is as far removed in time as possible. For example, a student specializing in Modern European History could not take a course in Early Modern European History for the pre-modern requirement but should instead take something further removed, such as Ancient Greek History. Please consult with a member of the UNDED to be sure that the course you have selected is appropriate (whether or not it is in the same region as your specialization).

Space: Majors must take 2 courses in regions removed from their chosen specialization. These courses must cover two different regions. Therefore, a student specializing in some part of Europe must take two courses in Africa, East or South Asia, Latin America/Caribbean, Middle East, and/or the U.S. Concentrators must take 1 course in a different region from the specialization.

For students having a thematic specialization time & space requirements are determined in an ad-hoc basis. Such students should consult with a member of UNDED to determine what courses would fulfill the breadth requirement.

In the event a course covers multiple geographic regions where one of the regions involves the specialization, that course cannot be used to fulfill the breadth requirement (except in rare instances approved by the DUS). For example, a student specializing in "20th Century U.S. History" cannot fulfill the requirement with a class on WWII in a global perspective.

Thematic Specializations: Students with thematic or cross-regional specializations will have their breadth requirements modified, if necessary, in consultation with a member of UNDED.

Note: Students may not use a single course to fulfill more than one part of the breadth requirement. For example, a student specializing in Modern Latin American History could not count “History of Ancient China to the End of the Han” toward both their “time” and “space” breadth requirements.

SEMINAR REQUIREMENT (FOR MAJORS): History majors must complete a seminar requirement by taking two seminars (which are normally listed at the 3000 or 4000 level). At least one of these courses must be in the student’s specialization. Seminars must be completed at either Columbia or Barnard. Seminars taken abroad or at other universities may count toward the overall number of credits, but do NOT fulfill the seminar requirement. Registration for undergraduate seminars is often (but not always) by instructor’s permission.

The two-term Senior Thesis Seminar (HIST UN3838-3839) counts as 2 courses, but only as 1 seminar, normally within the specialization. Only majors may write a senior thesis.

Senior Thesis Seminar Pre-requisite: Students writing a senior thesis must take at least 1 seminar by their junior year so that they have experience writing a substantial research paper. However, exceptions might be made for students who declared their specialization late in their junior year and were therefore unable to take a research seminar before. Such students should consult with the DUS.

Senior Thesis Seminar Grading Policy: All students registered in the year-long Senior Thesis Seminar will receive a “YC” (year course) grade at the end of the fall term and their final letter grade at the end of the spring term. After completing the seminar, the letter grade will count for both semesters, and students will have 8 credits (or two courses) to be applied toward their major in History. The second term of the seminar (HIST UN3839) can count toward their specialization and can be used as one of the two seminar requirements.

Note: If students withdraw after the fall term, they will receive a Pass/Fail grade, and that course cannot be applied to the History major.

Sample Plans of Study

Below are some examples of possible specializations and breadth courses (see examples of completed Plan of Study forms at the end of the handbook). Majors must complete a total of 9 courses, including two seminars.

PLAN 1

Specialization: Medieval History

- HIST BC1062 Intro to the Later Middle Ages
- HIST UN1020 Crime & Punishment in the Middle Ages
- HIST UN3061 Islam & Europe in the Middle Ages
- HIST UN2072 Daily Life in Medieval Europe

Breadth Requirement

- Removed in Time: HIST UN2330 Europe Since 1945
- Removed in Space: HIST BC3861 Body Histories: Foot-Binding (seminar)
- Removed in Space: HIST UN2618 The Modern Caribbean

Electives (Additional Courses)

- ANY History Course 1 (lecture or seminar)
- ANY History Course 2 (lecture or seminar)

PLAN 2

Specialization: 20th Century U.S. History

- HIST BC1402 American Civilization Since the Civil War
- HIST UN2425 The Presidency Since 1945
- HIST UN2407 America Since 1960
- HIST UN3450 Histories of American Capitalism (seminar)

Breadth Requirement

- Removed in Time: HIST BC1062 Intro to the Later Middle Ages
- Removed in Space: HIST UN2760 Main Currents in African History
- Removed in Space: HIST UN2660 Latin American Civilization I

Electives (Additional Courses)

- ANY History Seminar (to meet the 2nd seminar requirement)
- ANY History Course (lecture or seminar)

Specialization: Modern European History

- HIST BC 1302 Introduction to European History: French Revolution to the Present
- HIST UN2360 British History from 1867
- HIST UN2302 The European Catastrophe, 1914-1945
- HIST GU4322 German History: 1740-1914 (seminar)

Breadth Requirement

- Removed in Time: HIST UN1004 Ancient History of Egypt
- Removed in Space: HIST UN2800 Gandhi's India
- Removed in Space: HIST UN2535 History of the City of New York

Electives (Additional Courses)

- ANY History Seminar (to meet the 2nd seminar requirement)
- ANY History Course (lecture or seminar)

Sample Plans for Cross-regional and Thematic Specializations

3-course breadth requirements set in consultation with a member of UNDED

PLAN 4

Specialization: Intellectual History

- HIST UN2311 Modern European Intellectual History
- HIST UN2478 US Intellectual History, 1865-Present
- HIST GU4105 Intellectual Origins of Political Economy (seminar)
- HIST UN3384 Tocqueville and Social Theory (seminar)

Time Requirement

- HIST UN1010 The Ancient Greeks, 800-146 BCE

Space Requirement

- HIST UN2671 Militarism in Latin America
- HSEA UN2338 Cultural History of Japanese Monsters

Electives (Additional Courses)

- ANY History Course 1 (lecture or seminar)
- ANY History Course 2 (lecture or seminar)

PLAN 5

Specialization: Women's History

- HIST UN2106 Politics and Gender in Early Modern Europe
- HIST BC2038 Women in Modern Europe
- HIST UN2651 History of American Women, 1776-Present
- HSEA GU4886 Gender, Passions, and Social Order in China (seminar)

Time Requirement

- HIST UN2110 Renaissance, An Introduction

Space Requirement

- HIST BC2321 Colonial Encounters: Europe and the Culture of Empire
- HSEA UN2869 Modern Japan, 1800-Present

Electives (Additional Courses)

- ANY History Seminar (to meet the 2nd seminar requirement)
- ANY History Course (lecture or seminar)

PLAN 6

Specialization: Comparative Empires

- HIST UN23020 Roman Imperialism
- HIST UN2220 Imperial Russia, 1682-1918
- HIST UN2312 British History, 1760-1867
- HIST GU4310 Europe and the End of Empires (seminar)

Time Requirement

- HIST UN2072 Daily Life in Medieval Europe

Space Requirement

- HSEA UN2881 History of Modern China II
- HIST BC2567 American Women in the 20th Century

Electives (Additional Courses)

- ANY History Seminar (to meet the 2nd seminar requirement)
- ANY History Course (lecture or seminar)

UNDERGRADUATE SCHOOLS & SPECIAL PROGRAMS

COLUMBIA COLLEGE: Columbia College students typically declare their major in the spring of their sophomore year during the time frame scheduled by the College. Declaration is done through the Center for Student Advising website. Students must consult with their College advisor to be certain all college Core (as opposed to history) requirements are completed. For more information:

<https://goo.gl/zJBsgT>

SCHOOL OF GENERAL STUDIES: General Studies students may declare a major or concentration by submitting a Major Declaration Form to the Office of the GS Dean of Students. A Plan of Study form should then be completed and approved by a member of UNDED. Note that unlike Columbia College, GS requires a major for graduation; a concentration alone is not sufficient. GS Declaration Forms are available in 403 Lewisohn. For more information: <https://goo.gl/HcsTVE>

GS/JTS Dual Degree Program

Students in the JTS dual degree program may transfer up to 3 courses worth of history courses for a history major (following the normal procedures and rules for transferring credits). No more than 2 courses can be applied to the specialization, as with all other transfers of credit.

General Studies-Sciences Po joint BA Program

Soon after arrival on campus, students in the General Studies-Sciences Po joint BA program should apply with the UA (undergraduate-history@columbia.edu) to transfer history coursework from Sciences Po. If approved by the DUS, Science Po history courses can be used to fulfill the departmental distribution requirements as well as requirements for the specialization within the major. Normal departmental rules for study abroad apply, and students must follow the procedures for receiving transfer credit as outlined in the Undergraduate Handbook on pg. 13:

- No more than 3 courses will be granted, and no more than 2 courses in the student's specialization. Students are advised to take courses in a diversity of areas (and not only Europe) to maximize the number of transferable credits.
- Majors must fulfill the seminar requirement in history at Columbia or Barnard.
- All syllabi, written work and transcripts must be included with a transfer credit application.
- The required "Introduction to Contemporary History" can only count as a modern Europe class.

SCHOOL OF PROFESSIONAL STUDIES: Requirements for students in the Second Majors Program are the same as those for students in Columbia College.

WHAT COUNTS AS A HISTORY COURSE

The following count as History courses:

- Courses in the History Departments of both Columbia and Barnard.
- Courses from other departments accepted by the History Department of Columbia (found in the “Courses” section of the department’s website and in the “Cross-Listed” course listings in the online bulletin: <https://goo.gl/b14NU4>). Requests for cross listing a course needs to be done by the end of the first week of the semester. No course from another department can be accepted after this period.
- History Department courses used to fulfill the CC/GS Global Core or the GS Cultural Diversity Requirements (e.g., HIST UN2660/2661, Latin American Civilization I/II).
- Certain courses offered outside the Department but taught by affiliated faculty members. These can include: African Civilizations (AFCV UN1020), East Asian Civilizations: China (ASCE UN1359), East Asian Civilizations: Japan (ASCE UN1361), and East Asian Civilizations: Korea (ASCE UN1363). Note that if a History faculty member or affiliate is not the instructor of a specific section, it does not count towards the major or concentration. For a list of core and affiliated faculty members, please visit the department’s website: <https://goo.gl/euYUdd>.
- Transfer courses accepted for History major: Up to the equivalent of 3 courses taken through study abroad programs, with up to 2 courses counting for the specialization. These will be evaluated according to syllabi and written work for those classes.
- Graduate courses taught by History Department faculty.

The following do NOT count as History courses:

- Advanced Placement courses from High School or British A-levels. Students may receive 3 credits toward the Columbia degree for a score of 5 on the AP European History exam or the AP United States History exam. No points count toward the History major or concentration or fulfill any requirements in the major or concentration.
- Any course in which students have earned a D or lower.
- Any history course taken Pass/Fail.
- Courses counted toward the requirements of another major or concentration.

When in doubt, ask a member of UNDED or the Undergraduate Administrator if a course counts.

WHAT COUNTS AS A SEMINAR

The following count as seminars:

- Any 3000 or 4000-level history seminar offered by the Columbia or Barnard History Departments, or any course specifically listed as fulfilling the seminar requirement among seminar offerings.
- For the two-term Senior Thesis Seminar (HIST UN3838/3839 or HIST UN3840/3841 for independent thesis writers): the first term counts as one of the 9 courses for the History major (but not within the specialization), while the second term counts as a seminar (normally within the specialization). Note: HIST UN3838/UN3839 and HIST UN3840/3841 are available to majors only
- Ordinarily, graduate courses in history count toward the seminar requirement

The following do NOT count as seminars:

- Independent-study senior thesis projects (HIST UN3840 or 3841) written in one term
- Supervised Individual Research (HIST UN3951/3952)
- Seminars taken abroad or at other institutions

UNDERGRADUATE ADVISING

UNDERGRADUATE EDUCATION COMMITTEE (UNDED): UNDED is comprised of 8-9 faculty members from a range of specialties. In addition to approving Plan of Study forms, all members of UNDED are ready to help undergraduates by clarifying requirements for the major or concentration, directing students toward appropriate courses, and simply discussing students' experiences. Typical questions, concerns, course choice and choice of specialization, independent research, and the senior thesis. UNDED members hold office hours during the fall and spring terms. The History Department does not assign individual advisors; students may see any member of UNDED for advising concerns.

As membership of UNDED changes from year to year, please consult the department's website for an up-to-date roster

DIRECTOR OF UNDERGRADUATE STUDIES (DUS): The DUS oversees the undergraduate program and serves as the chair of UNDED. The DUS makes final decisions on all matters concerning the major or concentration. Only the DUS can determine what transfer and study abroad courses can be applied to the major, as well as whether courses outside the Department can count toward the major.

UNDERGRADUATE ADMINISTRATOR (UA): The UA keeps students informed of program deadlines, department events, the seminar application process, new courses, fellowships, and other matters of interest to majors and concentrators. The UA also files signed Plan of Study forms and collects transfer credit applications on behalf of the DUS.

COLUMBIA HISTORY ASSOCIATION & UNDERGRADUATE HISTORY COUNCIL

The Columbia Historical Association (CHA) is a student organization comprised of all history majors, minors, and those otherwise interested in being more involved with history on campus through attending history-related events. CHA is always looking to expand its community of passionate history students and encourages its members to be active through participation in events such as study halls, professor lunches, and trivia nights. Being an active member of CHA will distinguish those who are interested in pursuing leadership opportunities within CHA.

The Undergraduate History Council (UHC) was founded in 2005 as a group of undergraduate representatives for history majors and concentrators. UHC's primary two functions were to plan and execute history-related events throughout the academic year to foster in a greater sense of community amongst the undergraduate history students, as well as serve as a liaison for students to the Undergraduate Education Committee (UNDED). These two functions still remain the primary tasks of UHC today. The original organization of UHC comprised of 1-2 Chairs, whose role was oversight over projects and directly speaking to UNDED, and ~10 standing members who would focus on organizing events.

PROCEDURES

PLAN OF STUDY FORM (POS): In the fall of the junior and senior years, majors and concentrators must fill out a Plan of Study form (with the exception of those studying abroad in the fall term). This form is available in the back of this handbook, in the department office (413 Fayerweather) and on the department's website. On the Plan of Study form, students declare their specialization, plan their courses for the year (though these may change), and ensure that they are meeting the requirements of their program. Students must meet with a member of UNDED to review these forms, then file their signed Plan of Study forms with the UA (undergraduate-history@columbia.edu).

POS DEADLINES

- October: Seniors
- March: Juniors & Seniors (amended POS)

Approved POS forms should be submitted to the UA. The Plan of Study form will be compared against the transcript to certify students for graduation. Seniors who fail to submit an UNDED approved POS can end up short of fulfilling requirements and may delay or prevent graduation!

INDEPENDENT STUDY: Students may arrange independent study courses with individual members of the faculty. In the semester before enrolling in a course, the student must find a faculty sponsor and submit a proposal to the DUS and the UA along with evidence of the sponsor's consent. The proposal is due by August 1 for the fall term or December 1 for the spring term. The UA will assist approved students with registration. An independent study course is distinct from an independent senior thesis course (which requires an application that is available on the thesis section of the department's website), but the deadlines are the same. These courses cannot fulfill the seminar requirement.

TRANSFER AND STUDY-ABROAD CREDITS: Transfer credits are credits students have earned at an accredited college in the United States. Study abroad credits are credits earned at approved programs outside the United States. The department has a single set of procedures and requirements for approving courses taken for both types of credit. Credit toward the major or concentration is given only for transfer or study-abroad courses taken for a letter grade. Majors may apply a maximum of 3 courses toward the major, no more than 2 of which may be applied toward the specialization. Concentrators may apply a maximum of 2 transfer or study-abroad courses toward the concentration, no more than 1 of which may be applied toward the specialization. One exception exists to this rule: majors may receive credit for up to 4 History courses for a full year of study abroad at Oxford or Cambridge University, while concentrators may receive credit for up to 3. Transfer or study-abroad courses may be used to fulfill the breadth requirements. Majors should keep in mind that seminar requirements must be fulfilled in the History Departments of Columbia or Barnard.

Students wishing to have transfer or study-abroad credits applied to the major or concentration must first receive approval from Columbia College or General Studies. Credits that do not receive CC or GS approval will not be reviewed by the Department. Once university approval has been obtained, students should bring the materials listed below to the UA, who will give them to the DUS. The DUS will then review the materials and make a determination about credit. Please be sure to provide the following:

- A copy of your Columbia transcript showing that you have received university credit.
- A copy of your transcript from the other institution, highlighting courses requested.
- A copy of the syllabus for any course you wish to have considered for history credit.
- An updated Plan of Study Form.

- A completed Addendum for Transfer Credits and Study Abroad Credits
- Available coursework from the courses, such as papers or exams (needed only for study abroad courses, unless otherwise specified by the DUS).

STUDY ABROAD

History majors and concentrators may choose to study abroad as part of their undergraduate education. This is typically done during the junior year for one term. A period of study overseas offers history students excellent opportunities to develop language skills as well as begin research projects that may be developed into a senior thesis. Members of UNDED will be happy to discuss your plans and how they fit both with your intellectual goals and with the requirements of your program. The University has direct ties to programs of study in several countries, including Reid Hall in Paris, the Oxford/Cambridge Program in Great Britain, Kyoto University in Japan, and the Berlin Consortium at the Freie Universität in Berlin. Study at other overseas universities must be approved by the College (not the Department) in advance, although students are strongly advised to discuss their program with a member of UNDED before leaving the United States. A list of approved study abroad programs is available on the Office of Global Programs and Fellowships website , <http://ogp.columbia.edu/>.

The exact number of study-abroad courses that may be applied toward the major or concentration depends on the program and is determined only after the student returns to Columbia. Majors may apply a maximum of 3 courses toward the major, no more than 2 of which may be applied toward the specialization. Concentrators may apply a maximum of 2 transfer or study-abroad courses toward the concentration, no more than 1 of which may be applied toward the specialization.

One exception exists to this rule: majors may receive up to 4 courses for a full year of study abroad studying History at Oxford or Cambridge University, no more than 3 of which may be applied toward the specialization; concentrators may receive and apply 3 and 2.

Before your departure: Consult with the DUS, especially if you are going abroad for your entire junior year. The DUS may be able to give you a preliminary indication of which courses will be likely to count toward your requirements. However, remember that courses are formally approved by the DUS only after you have returned with the documentation listed in the previous section.

While you are abroad: E-mail the UA with any questions or concerns that may arise. Keep all your syllabi, notes, written work, and any and all written evaluations you receive, to aid the DUS in evaluating your coursework. If evaluations are typically given orally, ask about the possibility of a written version of the evaluation.

Upon your return: Follow the procedures for evaluation of transfer and study-abroad credits described in the previous section.

DEPARTMENTAL HONORS

UNDED awards departmental honors on the basis of a high grade point average in a challenging mix of history courses (at least 3.6) as well as an excellent senior thesis. Students must also have an overall GPA of at least 3.6. The committee takes into account the depth and breadth of the program of study for each honors candidate. Normally, no more than 10% of graduating majors receive Departmental Honors. Please see: <https://goo.gl/FJmJDS>

Important: In order to submit a senior thesis for departmental honors (or senior thesis prize) consideration, the thesis must be written in two consecutive terms beginning in the fall and culminating in the spring. An independent thesis written in one term cannot be considered for honors and prizes consideration; an independent thesis written in two consecutive terms from fall to spring can be submitted.

SENIOR THESIS (MAJORS ONLY)

History majors have the option of writing a senior thesis over one or two terms. This process involves original research, normally with extensive use of primary materials. The department encourages students with a strong interest in a particular subject to consider a thesis and strongly advises all students considering an academic career to write one. Many students find the senior thesis the most rewarding academic experience of their undergraduate career.

Students are advised to begin thinking about whether they wish to write a thesis, and about possible topics by the start of junior year. The DUS holds an organizational meeting for juniors who are curious about writing a senior thesis in the spring term.

With some prior planning, it is possible to gain access (whether through travel or through inter-library loan) to sources not available at Columbia. Many students begin thesis research the summer before their senior year; others are able to do original research while studying abroad as juniors. It is quite possible to research and write a fine thesis during the senior year, using only sources available in the New York area. Columbia College and the School of General Studies grant research funds for thesis writers in the fall semester of senior year. The department keeps thesis writers informed of the application process.

Theses ought to be between 13,000 and 17,000 words. Determinations of honors rest on quality, not length. Verbosity and diffuseness work against the awarding of honors and prizes.

A thesis written in two consecutive fall to spring terms is required—but not sufficient—for a student to receive departmental honors.

A thesis is normally written in the year-long Senior Thesis Seminar, HIST UN3838/3839. Students interested in taking a Senior Thesis Seminar must submit an application by the announced deadline in the preceding spring semester, normally in late March. Students with extenuating circumstances, such as study abroad in the fall of senior year, may enroll in a thesis seminar for only one semester with permission from the DUS. However, theses written in one term cannot be submitted for departmental honors and prizes consideration.

All students registered in the year-long Senior Thesis Seminar will receive a “YC” (year course) grade at the end of the fall term and their final grade at the end of the spring term. After completing the seminar, this grade will count for both semesters, and students will have 8 credits (or two courses) to be applied toward their major in History. The second term of the seminar (HIST UN3839) will count toward as a seminar in the specialization.

Note: If students withdraw after the fall term, they will receive a Pass/Fail grade, and 4 credits (or one course) will be applied to the History major. In this event, the course will not count toward their specialization and cannot be used to fulfill one of the two seminar requirements.

Alternatively, students who wish to work with a member of the department on an individual basis may register for a one- or two-term independent senior thesis section for 2-4 credits per term (HIST UN3840/3841). If you wish to pursue this option, you should identify an appropriate supervisor in the term before you begin the thesis. A short proposal, approved by the supervisor, should be forwarded to the Director of Undergraduate Studies before the beginning of the thesis term: by August 1 for the fall term and December 1 for the spring term. After receiving approval, please contact the Undergraduate Administrator regarding registration. If both terms of HIST UN3840-41 are completed, only the second term can be used to fulfill the seminar requirement (with DUS approval). Independent theses written in one term cannot fulfill the seminar requirement and cannot be considered for honors and prizes consideration.

Theses are read and graded by the thesis advisor. All theses are also read by faculty Second Readers chosen by students in consultation with the senior thesis instructor. Students will receive formal written comments from their Second Reader.

PRIZES & FELLOWSHIPS

Undergraduate Fellowships and Thesis Funding

SUMMER RESEARCH PROGRAM: A department sponsored program for history majors or concentrators; graduating seniors are not eligible. Selected students have the opportunity to support a faculty member with his or her summer research projects. Students may not work for greater than 60 hours. Information on how to apply is announced to eligible majors and concentrators in early spring, and the submission deadline is normally in April.

EDWIN ROBBINS SUMMER RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP: A stipend awarded by Columbia College to two CC junior history majors for summer research on a senior thesis project. After obtaining the support of a faculty member willing to supervise a research project, applicants should submit a research proposal following the guidelines established in the application; the announced deadline is normally in mid-April. As the fellowship may not be given out every year, please check with the Undergraduate Administrator before applying. For more information, please check the "Thesis" page of the History Department website.

PRESIDENT'S GLOBAL INNOVATION FUND: A grant awarded to rising seniors who will be using European archives to write a senior thesis. Proposals are usually due at the end of March. Please consult the "Thesis" page of the department website for an application.

CC/GS THESIS FUNDING: CC and GS offer seniors grants to defray the costs associated with thesis writing. Please consult the "Thesis" page of the department website for application links.

Undergraduate Prizes in History (awarded to Senior Thesis writers)

- Charles A. Beard Prize: Given by the Department for a senior thesis of distinction in any historical field or period.
- Garrett Mattingly Prize: Given by the Department for a senior thesis of distinction in any historical field or period.
- Lily Prize: Given by the Department for the best senior thesis in history on a non-U.S. topic. Established by James P. Shenton in memory of his mother.
- Herbert H. Lehman Prize for Excellence in History: Given to a General Studies student with an outstanding record of accomplishment in history courses at Columbia. Preference given to those with substantial coursework in U.S. History.
- Chanler Historical Prize: Given by the College for the best essay submitted by a senior on a topic dealing with the history of the American civil government.
- Albert Marion Elsberg Prize: Given by the College for a sophomore, junior, or senior who has demonstrated excellence in modern history.
- Alan J. Willen Memorial Prize: Given by the College and awarded by the Departments of History and Political Science for the best seminar paper on a contemporary American political problem.

Other Prizes of Interest

The following prizes are not administered by the Department of History. Queries concerning these prizes should be directed to the Office of the Dean of Academic Affairs, Columbia College (208 Hamilton).

- Carl B. Boyer Prize in the History of Science: For the best essay on any topic in the history of science or mathematics.
- Dino Bigongiari Prize: For a senior who has written an outstanding essay on Italian civilization or whose work in regular Italian courses is judged to be most worthy of distinction.
- Dean Hawkes Memorial Prize: For the junior who is judged to be most deserving on the basis of work in the humanities.
- Helen and Howard R. Marraro Prize: For an undergraduate of high academic distinction and promise in an area of study concerned with Italian culture.
- Peter M. Riccio Prize: For a student who is not a native speaker of Italian but has an excellent record in the study of some aspect of Italian culture.
- Taraknath Das Foundation Award: For a student in the College for excellence in Asian studies.

GUIDELINES FOR PAPERS

FOOTNOTING AND BIBLIOGRAPHICAL STYLE: Good practice in citing sources in history papers calls for footnotes (or endnotes) and bibliographies. Consistency of style is essential, though the department has no required particular style; instructors have the last word in what is appropriate for their courses. On the whole the History Department advises that you follow The Chicago Manual of Style, 16th ed. Chicago, Chicago University Press, 2010 (online at <https://goo.gl/Yw4TNw>). We urge you to develop good habits in citing authorities for history papers along the guidelines below.

Footnotes are preferred to in-text citations. In this respect, history differs from most science, social science and some humanities disciplines. Short essays with only a few well-identified sources may simply employ in-text citations, for example: (Smith, 34), but longer essays should use full footnotes and include a bibliography.

In footnotes, authors' names are arranged in normal order with given names first, followed by family names, e.g. Fredrick Flintstone and Barnaby Rubble, Of Rocks and Dinosaurs. The first footnote for a given source should contain all information for that source, while subsequent ones may be shortened.

Below are footnotes from a hypothetical research paper about The New York Times and reports from Moscow and Hanoi by the correspondent and writer Harrison Salisbury, as an example:

1. Gay Talese, The Kingdom and the Power, 2nd ed. (New York: Ivy Press, 1992): 501.
2. Richard F. Shepard, The Paper's Papers: A Reporter's Journey through the Archives of the New York Times (New York: Times Books, 1996): 100.
3. Harrison Salisbury, 'Without Fear or Favor': The New York Times and its Times (New York: Times Books, 1996): 13.
4. Salisbury, A Journey for Our Times: A Memoir (New York: Harper & Row, 1983): 323.
5. Shepard, Paper's Papers, 178.
6. Salisbury, Journey, 15.
7. Mark A. Lawrence, "Mission Intolerable: Harrison Salisbury's Trip to Hanoi," Pacific Historical Review 75 (August 2006): 430.
8. Susan E. Tifft and Alex S. Jones, The Trust: the Private and Powerful Family behind the New York Times (Boston: Little Brown, 1999): 630.

In footnotes containing repeated citations of the same source, current practice prefers the author's last name and page. If you cite multiple works by the same author, use a shortened version of the title, such as Salisbury, Journey, followed by a page number, as shown above. The older forms of citation, ibid. and loc. cit. are no longer used.

Bibliographies are arranged alphabetically by authors' last names. For titles with multiple authors, the family name of the first author comes first, and subsequent authors are listed in normal order, e.g. Flintstone, Frederick and Barnaby Rubble, Of Rocks and Dinosaurs.

Below is a hypothetical bibliography to accompany the preceding notes, as an example:

Lawrence, Mark A. "Mission Intolerable: Harrison Salisbury's Trip to Hanoi." Pacific Historical Review, 75 (August 2006): 429-458.

Salisbury, Harrison. A Journey for Our Times: A Memoir. New York: Harper & Row, 1983.

_____. 'Without Fear or Favor': The New York Times and its Times. New York: Times Books, 1996.

Shepard, Richard F. The Paper's Papers: A Reporter's Journey Through the Archives of the New York Times. New York: Times Books, 1996.

Talese, Gay. The Kingdom and the Power. 2nd ed. New York: Ivy Press, 1992.

Tifft, Susan E. and Alex S. Jones. The Trust: the Private and Powerful Family behind the New York Times. Boston: Little Brown, 1999.

Footnotes to websites. Give author, title, URL address, <date posted> and (date accessed). For example: Harry Hopkins, Work Relief Administration Press Conference, 11 June 1934, New Deal Network, <http://newdeal.feri.org/workrelief/hop06.htm>, <posted 7/14/02> (accessed 8/23/05).

DEVELOPING YOUR OWN VOICE: As teachers of history, we want students to develop their own ideas and the ability to express them. A distinctive voice is one of the most important things a college education can give you. Studying history is an excellent way to develop your voice. Contrary to popular belief, history is not just a series of dates and facts without argument or analytical framework. History involves reflection about past events, the people involved, their causes, and their significance. No history professor wants a student simply to repeat what he or she has read or been told. They want to see students consider the issue at hand and reframe it in a creative way. Originality draws upon ideas and information from other sources but requires that you put them together in a novel, distinctive, and coherent way.

Proper citation allows you to separate what you know and think from what others have said, so that readers can appreciate the power of your ideas. It reveals where you got your information and enables your readers to trust you as a reliable writer. All scholarship depends on that trust. Without good citations that can be traced to the sources you have used, your work is something else: fiction, propaganda, lies, deception, or fantasy. For your citations to be effective, you have to know when to use them. You don't have to use them for widely known facts (example: "George Washington was the first president of the United States."). You must cite when you put lesser-known information into your paper (the population of the U.S. in 1800, say), or use someone else's words, ideas, or analytical framework. The citation lets you show the reader that you have done your research and marks those findings from your own thoughts and interpretations of that research. It also lets readers verify and follow up on your claims. Without citations, your voice and credibility gets lost.

ACADEMIC HONESTY

Plagiarism means passing off someone else's ideas, research, words, or analytical frameworks as your own, intentionally or not. It is intellectual theft. Many examples of plagiarism are flagrant and obvious, if increasingly common: copying, purchasing, or stealing someone else's paper and turning it in as your own; copying out a whole section directly from a book, an article, or off the Internet and putting it into your paper without showing its source; or including important facts or data without citing a source as if you compiled them yourself. Often plagiarism is unintentional or unconscious. For example, you may like what a source says and actually quote a sentence from it directly and put a footnote to the source, which would not be considered plagiarism. But if you continue to paraphrase or summarize more from the same source without another footnote acknowledging that you are still drawing on that source, you will be misleading the reader into thinking that the author's ideas are your own.

FRAMEWORKS: If you borrow someone else's analytical framework without telling the reader, you are still unjustly passing off someone else's work as your own. So, for example, if you read an article by Arthur Finkelstein where he claims "There are two forms of nationalism in China: ethnic and religious," you cannot simply repeat this in your paper without attribution. You have to say, "According to Finkelstein, Chinese nationalism comes in two forms. One is ethnic. The other is religious." And then provide a footnote. You can use his framework to help make sense of the material in question, but you must be clear that you are doing so. Giving credit does not make you less original or intelligent. Writers of all sorts give credit all the time. You just have to be clear about it. Otherwise you are committing plagiarism. Good history is a collective enterprise: it builds on the work of earlier scholars and furnishes a basis that future scholars will use as their point of departure. Yes, we see farther than our predecessors did, but without their work to support us, our understanding would be extremely limited.

Quotations and citations acknowledge your debt to earlier scholars and illustrate how you are building on their ideas. For this reason, it is important to keep quotations brief and to make sure that they illustrate a point of yours. Just presenting long quotations from important scholars, even if you agree with everything they say, does not let your reader understand your thinking or advance your argument.

You must render your claims in your own words and let the reader understand why you agree with a particular interpretation.

When you write a paper, you become part of this collective enterprise of history writing. Taking advantage of the work of previous scholars means you're in the fortunate position of not having to re-invent the wheel. Your voice adds to the discussion that keeps the common stock of knowledge growing. Make sure your reader can see it.

NOTE-TAKING: A number of students, and even the occasional professional historian, have been caught plagiarizing because they took disorganized notes. Be careful when doing your research. Remember that the main goal is not just to absorb the information but also to distinguish your ideas from those of the source--even when you agree with it. If you are copying down a whole passage, include the quotes and note the page number. You can also write down whatever ideas come to you while you are reading the source, but be sure to distinguish these from what you are copying out of the source itself. You can put the thoughts in parentheses, or in a different script, or on a different part of the page. Figure out a notational system that makes sense to you and be consistent with it. If you are taking notes on a computer, keep them in a separate file from your paper.

The History Department treats issues of academic integrity on a case-by-case basis. You should be aware of the Columbia University Undergraduate Guide to Academic Integrity: <https://goo.gl/TkY1Ny>.

Breadth Requirement	3 courses outside specialization: 1 removed in time & 2 removed in space	2 courses outside specialization: 1 removed in time & 1 removed in space
Seminar Requirement	2 seminars, at least 1 in specialization	None

Specialization

The field should be defined, in consultation with a member of UNDED, according to geographical, chronological, and/or thematic criteria. A student might choose, for example, to specialize in “20th Century US History,” “European Diplomatic History,” “Ancient Roman History,” or “Korean and Japanese History.”

Breadth Requirement

Majors and concentrators must also fulfill a breadth requirement by taking courses outside of their specialization. Majors must take 3 breadth courses and concentrators must take 2. This requirement has two parts: time and space.

Time: Majors and concentrators must take at least one course specifically covering a time period far removed from their specialization. Students specializing in the modern period must take at least one course in the pre-modern period. Students specializing in the pre-modern period must take at least one course in the modern period. History courses cover a wide range of geographic fields, and the course used for the chronological breadth requirement can be in any geographic region. However if the region remains the same, the course MUST focus on a drastically different time period. For example, a student specializing in Modern European History could not take a course in Early Modern European History for the pre-modern requirement and would need to take something further removed, such as Ancient Greek History or Early Chinese History.

Space: Majors must take at least two additional courses in regional fields removed from their chosen specialization. A student specializing in some part of Europe must take two courses in Africa, East or South Asia, Latin America/Caribbean, Middle East, and/or the U.S. These two courses must also cover two different regions. Concentrators must take one geographic breadth course. If a course covers multiple geographic regions: if one of the regions involves the student’s specialization, then the course cannot count toward the breadth requirement unless it is specifically approved by the DUS. For example, a student specializing in “20th Century U.S. History” cannot count a class that examines World War II in a global perspective towards the breadth requirement.

Thematic Specializations: Students with thematic or cross-regional specializations will have their breadth requirements modified, if necessary, in consultation with a member of UNDED.

For more information about the requirements and for examples of acceptable programs of study, please see the Undergraduate Handbook.
