

SENIOR THESIS FELLOWSHIPS FOR RESEARCH IN EUROPEAN ARCHIVES

Thinking of writing a senior thesis?

Working on a topic in European history or one that uses European archival sources?

Eager to roll up your sleeves, sharpen your pencils, and dive into the archive?

Consider applying for the History Department's summer fellowship for history majors researching senior theses in European archives!

Introductory info session:
Friday, January 27th 2023 (time and location TBA)

Eligibility

- Current junior history majors in CC, Barnard, and GS
- Working on a topic that can be researched through European archives (including topics relating to other parts of the world whose sources are now housed in Europe, such as topics in imperial history)
- Available to spend 4–6 weeks over the summer conducting archival research, and to attend a workshop in Paris in July
- Submit a completed application, including a proposal for the topic and research to be undertaken, by the deadline of March 24th, 2023

Program Details

- Supports 6–8 students for 4–6 weeks of research in European archives
- Includes a $5,000 stipend
- Workshop in Paris in July to troubleshoot and benefit from advice from Columbia faculty and graduate student instructors
- Gives participants a head start on their senior theses

Next Steps

Attend info session on Friday, January 27th 2023 (time and location TBA)

- Join our mailing list and stay tuned for information about spring workshops, conducted by Heath Rojas: finding a topic, identifying sources, writing a prospectus
- Submit a completed application by March 24th, 2022

Questions?

- Contact Professors Charly Coleman (cc3472@columbia.edu), Lisa Tiersten (ltierste@barnard.edu), or the graduate assistant Heath Rojas (hmr2138@columbia.edu)